Thirty-Sixth Anniversary of Congregational Club.

ORDER OF EXERCISES THE OCCASION CELEBRATED

WITH MUSIC AND ADDRESSES. Business Meeting Held and Officers

Chosen for Ensuing Year-

Guests Present.

After a good dinner, which was served by the ladies of the First Congregational Church in the Sunday school room of the church last evening, the members of the Washington Congregational Club enjoyed the wise and witty speeches which had been provided for their entertainment. The function began at 6 o'clock with a reception in the parlors of the church. Here the members, as they came to attend the thirtysixth annual meeting of the organization, were each decorated with a red carnation Unlike most clubs, this organization is composed of both sexes, and on such an anniversary occasion as last night, when a banquet is on the program, husbands are not obliged to go by themselves. Their wives company them and enjoy the festivities of the evening. Before proceeding to the dinner table some business was transacted, the most important feature of which was the election of officers. Rev. John L. W. Ewell, D. D., who had served the club in the position of president during the past year, was recommended by the committee on nominations for re-election, and this action was heartly indorsed by the club. The company then proceeded to the banquet room, where the ladles of the church had set the prettily adorned table. The large room was practi-cally filled with the tables, and about them the members assembled, while about a table which was placed on the platform were the president and other officers of the club and those who had been invited to make addresses. The dinner was promptly served by an efficient corps of waiters from the small rooms on each side of the dining President Ewell as Toastmaster. When the dinner was over the diners turned their chairs so as to face the platform, and the assemblage was turned into an appreciative and interested audience of people in evening dress. President Ewell, in his prefatory remarks, which he made in the capacity of toastmaster, spoke elo-quently of the service to humanity of the Puritans, from whom a large number of those present claimed descent. He called attention to the reproduction on the first page of the program of the seal of the colony of Plymouth and then mentioned some of the labors of tho () early ploneers in their efforts to bring the Gospel to the Indians.

The first speaker to be introduced was Rev. C. J. Ryder, D. D., of New York city, who gave some account of the work done among the mountain whites of the souththe American highlanders, as he preferred to call them. As a missionary secretary he has had special opportunities for studying these people in their homes, and he made an earnest and eloquent plea for a people who had done such excellent service for the country in the late war, and whose ancestry dates back to revolutionary stock. He told his hearers what is being done with the money which generous people are giving in supplying schools and colleges and churches in that section of the country. He referred to Gen. O. O. Howard, who occupied a seat on the platform, and said he had perhaps done more than any other man toward helping these people to better things. Warm Welcome Extended. In introducing the next speaker, Mr. S. W. Woodward, the president referred to his well-known philanthropy and willingness to assist in any good undertaking, and said that he knew of no man who faced a collection basket with more cheerfulness than does Mr. Woodward. This reference elicited many demonstrations of approval from the listeners and Mr. Woodward received a warm and hearty welcome when he arose sentative of the Baptist churches of the pastor of the Church of the Covenant, was mentioned as the representative of the Presbyterian Church Mr. Woodward's theme was duty to our country, and he treated it in a thoughtful manner. He said that when he was a boy one way to do one's duty to his country was by bearing arms in its cause. He seriously hoped the day had passed when such a necessity would confront the people. Peace, he added, has its victories no less renowned than war. He believed the wel-fare of the world is in the hands of the English-speaking people. If this nation is to hold its place in the front ranks, the speaker said, we must have a body of citizens in harmony with the spirit of free institutions. He illustrated what he meant by types of twentieth century citizens by nentloning some whose names had becom known for their active and self-denying labors in promoting the welfare of others.

Mr. Woodward spoke of the various plans of philanthropic work and forms of service for others, and said that men who gave their best effort to such activities could be found in every walk of life. Not all men, he added, can achieve great things, but they can act well their part, support the flag of their country and keep their hearts open to appeals for help in bettering their fellow-men. In this way they will be most effectively doing their duty to country. The speaker's ringing, patriotic utterances were heartily appreciated, judging by the response elicited from the audience in the way of applause.

Other Themes Discussed. The next speaker was Rev. H. P. Beach of New York city, whose theme, "China," was treated in a way that was not only interesting but instructive. He pointed out the strong influences lying in the nature of the Chinese themselves, which causes them to stand in array against the advance of what is called modern progress or the adoption of western ideas. The laboring class and the lower government officials were spoken of as among the influences which were in opposition.

"Our Duty to the World" was the topic discussed by the next speaker, Rev. Dr. T. S. Hamlin, who pointed out that wideness of sympathy, cosmopolitanism, the outlook of a citizen of the world, were qualities requisite to enable us to recognize the brotherhood of men, and to enable us to do our duty to the world, or, rather, to realize what that duty is.

what that duty is.

Gen. O. O. Howard, who was next called upon, spoke in an interesting fashion, and this brought the speechmaking of the evening to a close, and the company soon dispersed.

During the evening Mrs. Charles B. Bayley, jr., and Mrs. D. Olin Leech sang, accompanied on the plano by Prof. Bischoff.

TWINS BORN UNITED.

Were Like Noted Siamese Pair, bu Did Not Survive.

A special dispatch to the Baltimore Sun from Philadelphia yesterday says: Twins united in a manner somewhat similar to that of the once noted Slamese twins were born in this city yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. William J. Flynn. Neither one of the children survived its birth. From a medical standpoint the birth of the twins was important, as it was the first case of the kind known in the medical annals of the United States. The parents are both young people, the mother being about twenty-four years and physicians viewed the two little bodies. If the parents are willing a post-mortem examination will be made, which is expected to yield much value to science.

Dr. J. H. Sargent of Broad and Dickinson streets was the attending physician, and on his invitation a number of eminent surgeons and physicians viewed the two little bodies.

The joined portion of the two infant bodies is much more extensive than was that of the Siamese twins. In that case there size of a man's arm, containing large ducts and blood vessels. In the Flynn dual child the whole of the right side of the one body. side of the other, the connecting substance being partly cartilaginous; but not bony, and a continuous skin covering both bodies The head, limbs and general conformation of each child appeared to be perfect. The weight of the dual child was eleven pounds.

BASED ON MISAPPREHENSION.

Criticism of President's Attitude on Forest Reservation.

"The criticism of the President's attitude on the question of forest reservation is evidently based upon misapprehension of the facts," said a prominent official of the geological survey today. "The survey has now under consideration the establishment of forest reserves in the mountainous regions in the state of Utah, and the methods of procedure in this case serve as an illustration of those employed throughout the United States. During the past three years petitions have been received from the citizens of Utah for the establishment of small reserves which would protect their water if there was something under them." supply for irrigation and domestic uses. These proposed reserves are as follows: The Logan, Salt Lake, Spanish Fork, Tocele, Huntington, Manti, Ferron, Gunnison, Salina, Aquarius, Monticello, Sevier, Panguish Lake, Duck Lake and Cold Creek forest reserves.

"Pending an examination which would fix the boundaries of those areas most de strable for forest reserve purposes, and eliminate such areas as are most suited for agriculture or grazing, the Secretary acted upon these petitions and withdrew from entry about 4,608,000 acres. A careful examination was made during the season of 1902 and the Secretary has decided to establish a system of forest reserves in Utah. During the past two weeks the Logan, Aqua-rius and Manti reserves have been recommended for proclamation, and it is possible that other recommendations will be made very soon. Within the past three days eight petitions have been received from citizens of Utah requesting their representadeavors to have made permanent at the earliest possible date those portions of the reserves that are now under consideration. It is probable that about 40 per cent of the area temporarily withdrawn from entry "In this connection it is stated that eac case is carefully considered by land, for-estry and grazing experts, to the end that all the interests and needs of the state may be weighed. These petitions indicate be-yond peradventure of a doubt that the need for immediate action on the part of the de-partment is pressing. Without the protection which a forest reserve will give to the water supply, it is stated that in less than five years the home-seeker, the man behind the plow, the actual taxpayer, the real backbone and sinew of that region, will be driven out and productive farms will be-driven out and productive farms will become desolate wastes.

"The department has not received one word of protest against the sequestration of these large areas in Itah. With regard to protests which have been received from other states, and they are mainly from corporations and individuals whose flocks and herds range here and thene over the public domain, it may be stated that they are far outnumbered by the petitions from actual settlers, whose future welfare is so inseparably connected with the wpreservation of forested mountain areas. forested mountain areas. on

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION. Will Await Return of the Postmaster

General.

No action will be taken by the Post Office Department with reference to complaints against the office of the assistant attorney general for the Post Office Department in connection with turf investment companies until the return of Postmaster General Payne, who is now in the West Indies. Pending his return Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow will continue an investigation of the matter, with a view to a full report to Mr. Payne. Mr. James M.

STORY OF A CABMAN

HER TWO COMPANIONS REMAIN-ED IN VEHICLE.

Made a Purchase in Drug Store on Her Way-Burdick's Daughter

A dispatch from Buffalo, N. Y., last night says: Mise Marion Burdick, the pretty, rosy-cheeked daughter of Edwin L. Burdick, was the most interesting witness at the inquest before Judge Murphy today. Marion is sixteen years old, and bears a striking resemblance to her mother. Like Mrs. Hull, she volunteered no information. She answered in monosyllables whenever possible. It was "Yes" or "No." When those replies would not suffice she used as few words as possible. She was not easily confused, and there was no sign of agitation or emotion when the district attorney questioned her closely regarding the events that occurred at the time her father was murdered. Attorney Coatsworth began by speaking kindly to the girl and carefully choosing his words in putting questions to her. batof which were met with replies both sharp and decisive. At one time when the dis-trict attorney asked the same question several times the girl caused a murmur in the courtroom by raising her voice sharply in a clear emphatic: "I don't know." Nothing of importance was elicited from her while she was on the stand, and the district attorney finally gave her up in despair. She said that Grandmother Hull first in-She said that Grandmother Hull first informed her that her father was ill in his "den." That was before Dr. Marcy arrived and before Mrs. Hull knew positively, according to her own testimony, that it was Burdick's body lying on the couch. The district attorney tried to get Marion to tell why she apparently took so little interest in her father's illness when she was told of it by her grandmother. Marion replied that she knew when it was proper for her to know Grandmother Hull would tell her. She loved her father, and he had tell her. She loved her father, and he had always been good to her, but she would not admit that there was anything wrong in her not inquiring about his illness or that she should have done differently.

Knew of Divorce Proceedings. Marion admitted that she knew of the ivorce proceedings instituted by Mr. Burdick against her mother. She sympathized with her father, but would not admit that she thought he was right in driving her mother from home. Neither would she admit that she knew of her mother meeting Arthur R. Pennell. Dr. William M. Marcy, the family physician and the first person to see the dead body after the murderer covered it up, was the first witness of the day. Dr. Marcy admitted that he told Dr. Howland, the medical examiner, that if it was suicide, or looked suicidal, it would be all the better for the family to make it out a case of suicide. Later he agreed with Dr. How-land that the suicide theory was untenable. Dr. Marcy said he had been the physician for the Burdicks for about seven years and also had treated Mrs. Hull profession-Dr Marcy said he received a telephone message from the Murray girl, one of Mrs.

Burdick's maids, about 8 o'clock on the morning after the murder. He was met at the door of the Burdick home by Mrs. 'What did she say to you?" asked District Attorney Coatsworth.
"She said the servants had found the front door open and a kitchen window open. She said that Mr. Burdick had been home the night before, but his bed had not been occupied."

Relating what followed, the doctor said he went into the den. He did so because Mrs. Hull said she had looked into that room. She told him she found the door of the den closed. He could not recall that Mrs. Hull had said she had seen Burdick

Mrs. Hull had said she had seen Burdick in there. Mrs. Hull was very nervous, the witness went on, and always had had some difficulty in sleeping. She had taken medi-cine to quiet her heart action, but not specifically to induce sleep. Dr. Marcy described the condition of the den when he entered it and told of finding the body on the couch.

Finding of the Body.

"Was there anything in the appearance of the couch to indicate that there was a body on the couch?" he was asked. "Well, the pillows were piled up rather high," was the reply, "and it looked as "But did there appear to be a body un-

Dr. Marcy said he made a casual examination of the body and left the room. "What did you tell Mrs. Hull?"
"I said, 'Burdick is dead and I think he nas been murdered.' " "What did she say?"

"She made an exclamation, 'My God,' or something like that, and said, 'How "Is that all she said?" "I do not recall anything else. I told her I would tell the children. I then telephoned for the medical examiner. "Then your opinion was that Burdick

'Yes. sir." "Did you notify the police?"
"No; I just notified Dr. Howland, the medical examiner. I thought that my duty ended there."

He also notified Mr. Parke, Mr. dick's partner. The witness said Mrs. Hull invited him to breakfact, and he sat and ate before Dr. Howland ar-during the breakfast hour. She was upstairs most of the time. "Relate the conversation between you and Howland in which the word suicide occurred," said the district attorney. "It was after the police came there. When Dr. Howland came down stairs we went into the parlor and sat down and talked the matter over. I said that if it was suicidal, or if it looked suicidal, and he could make it out a case of suicide, why it would be all the better for the family. He said it was not suicide, and I family. He said it was not suicide, and replied that that was all right. I spoke of it on the impulse of the moment." Motive for Suicide Theory. "It was quite a while after you had eached the house when you spoke to Howland about it being suicide?"

"And yet you spoke of it on the im-

"Well, I thought it would save Burdick's good name. I saw him almost dis-robed, lying on the couch, and I saw the lunch on the table, and it all looked very shady, especially as the divorce proceedings had been started."

Witness said Mrs. Hull had not asked him at any time how Burdick had been killed. He told Mrs. Hull to go upstairs before he entered the den. He did not think the che shall he there near the den.

think she should be there near the den. Witness remained in the house until about 12:30 o'clock. "I remained," he continued, "to look after Mrs. Hull. I thought she might need my assistance. She is a very old lady, and looked as if she might collapse." "You went up to her room after the police arrived?"

"Yes, sir; I thought I should be there to look after Mrs. Hull." "Didn't you object to certain questions put to her?"
"I think I objected to some questions about the divorce proceedings."

To Justice Murphy Dr. Marcy said he was of the opinion, judging from the lunch, etc., that Burdick's murder had grown out of the divorce proceedings. He thought he had had a woman visitor

Katle Koenig, a domestic in the Burdick family, was the next witness. She told in detail of the events of the evening, begin- insidious character of attack, the disease is ning with the arrival of Mr. Burdick with | never suspected until it is fully developed cocktail bottle, which she had not seen and beyond medical aid. The only h since he took it into the kitchen; of her having last seen Burdick in the hallway about 9:30 o'clock; that she retired about 9:50 o'clock, and heard no unusual noises during the night. Attorney Hartzel brought out the interesting fact that the gas in the hall and in the den was lighted by an electric appli-ance. By pressing the button the gas could be lighted. By pressing another button it was extinguished. On the night after the murder it was found that the electric arrangement in the den did not work. An investigation showed that some one had turned off the gas in the den instead of extinguishing it by means of the button, attorney's purpose in bringing out this on the night of the murder was not familiar with the electric arrangement for turning Cabmen Give Testimony. William V. Delahunt, the cabman who took an unknown man from in front of the Tuft House to the corner of Ashland avenue and Bryant street the night of the murder, told his story. "Did you afterward see Arthur R. Pennell in the district attorney's office?" said District Attorney Coatsworth.

"When you were asked in my office if he was the man you had taken to Ashland ave-nue and Bryant street, what was your reply?"
"I said I could not tell. The coat and the hat looked the same. I could not swear that it was Penne". Hackman Jeddo told of taking a party of three on the night of the murder from the corner of North Division street to the corner of Ashland avenue and Summer street. In the party were a man, a woman about thirty years old, with light red hair, and an older woman. On the way out Main street the younger woman left the carriage and entered a drug store, returning in a few minutes with a small package in her hand. At Summer and Main streets the man and the older woman left the carriage. and he took the younger woman to the corner of Summer street and Ashland ave-nue. She walked down Ashland in the direction of Burdick's house. He saw the same woman about two hours later down He had no conversation with Mrs. Hull "Did you ever see that woman again?" he was asked.

"I am not sure."

"Did you afterward see Marion W. Hutchnson on West Tupper street?" asked the district attorney. "I do not know what her name was."
"Well, did you see a young woman on West Tupper street?"

"Yes, sir. "Was she the same woman you took out to Ashland avenue and Summer street?" "She resembled her." "Can you say whether she was the same

"I cannot." Patrolman Meyer told of meeting the lone woman near the Burdick home at 1:10 o'clock on the morning of the murder. He would not be able to identify the woman if he again met her.
The hearing was then adjourned until Tuesday.

TALE OF A GRATEFUL MOOSE. Trainmen Rescued It From a Hole in the Ice.

A special to the New York Times from Utica, N. Y., says: The moose and elk liberated in the Adirondacks by the state of New York and William C. Whitney during the last two years have played rather odd pranks in the gardens of the natives and with loads of hay in transit, but it cannot be said that they are ungrateful animals. The home of the moose this winter has been in the vicinity of the Brown's Tract ponds, and there on Saturday evening the crew of a freight train on the Raquette Lake railroad discovered a cow moose in distress. The animal had been walking along the shore of a pond and broke through the tce and plunged about in the hole for some time, unable to help it-

Hydrophobia. From the New York Herald.

The sad death of the child of Dr. Loomis naturally calls to mind many possibilities regarding the occurrence of hydrophobia in households in which pet animals are kept. That there is need for reasonable apprehension in the matter is obvious enough. The worst of all is that in the great majority of instances, owing to the in preventive measures. The first and most important of these is the early recognition of the malady in the dog or cat. When an animal has been bitten it is always best to be on the watch for any after symptoms. These, alas! too frequently are soon forgotten in the long period which elapses between the infliction of the wound and the development of the hydrophobic phenomena. Often there is no knowledge of any direct exposure to infection, and the first intimation of danger is the alteration in the temper of the dog, his strange irritability, his desire to conceal himself and his snappish propensities. His appetite becomes so perverted that he is apt to chew and swallow sticks, stones, rags and any other objects within reach. An early bad symptom is the pitched and purposeless. The frothing at the mouth is profuse and the saliva is stringy and adherent. Toward the last he wanders from home, bites everything in his way until, overcome with exhaustion and paralysis, he sinks in his tracks. Hence strange dog or cat that acts "queerly" say this with no desire to give any particular animal a bad name, but merely put owners of pets on proper guard at a time when hydrophobia may become more prevalent than we had previous reasons for Photography and the Schools.

From the Photo Era. Something that is revolutionary in the educational circles of Europe is the recent introduction of photography in French schools as part of the curriculum. The minister of public instruction has authorized a novelty in the French lycees for the term which is just beginning. The Lycee Condorcet, the largest and most important of the Paris schools, begins the experiment of a photography class, and if this proves successful there will be classes in photography once, and afterward twice a week, in every school under state control in France. Photography has assumed such importance lately that M. Chaumle, the minister of public instruction, considers that no French boy's education is complete with-

TEN MONTHS OF PEACE AFTER DREADFUL Operations are becoming a fad; every young man, Operations are becoming a rac; every young man, as soon as he is graduated from a medical college, considers himself capable of undertaking the most serious and complicated surgical work, and hun-dreds of lives are sacrificed annually to this mad frenzy of incompetent men, to rush into work which should only be undertaken as a last resort,

It is a pleasure, in view of these facts, to read the following letter from a woman who has been saved from one of these dangerous operations. "I know I should have informed you long ago refor your book. I have never been bothered since then, and before I had suffered for the last elever to a child, and they came down with the delivery of the child by the handful. I could not get them said nothing but an operation would ever relieve me; but I read of your remedy in our daily newspaper, and told my husband to get me a box and I would give it a trial before consenting to the
